Speaker

Kirstin Gillon

Head of Research, Business Technology, ICAEW IT Faculty

Kirstin Gillon is a technical manager in the ICAEW IT Faculty and is responsible for the faculty's Making Information Systems Work thought leadership program. In this role, she writes a wide variety of reports and articles on IT in business, liaises with the academic community and organizes topical discussion-based events. She is the principal author of the faculty's publications Measuring IT Returns and Building Trust in a Digital Age: Rethinking Privacy, Property and Security and co-author of two papers in the academic journal Communications of the Association of Information Systems.

She joined ICAEW from PricewaterhouseCoopers' IT consultancy practice and previously worked at IBM as a project manager. Kirstin has a Masters degree in international law from McGill University, Montreal.

About the seminar

Topics to be addressed:

➤ Building trust in the digital age

New technologies are changing the nature of information risks for businesses, with increasing concerns about the security and appropriate use of information seen across the world. What are the growing security challenges and what is good practice in information security? What are the implications of cloud computing and the use of personal devices in businesses? What are the high profile challenges to privacy and intellectual property frameworks that we see today, such as the wide spread use of personal information by businesses and the rise of online file sharing? The session will draw on ICAEW's thought leadership report Building trust in the digital age.

➤ Computing in the cloud?

Cloud computing is moving into the mainstream. More and more accountants are looking at cloud computing as a way of adding value to their business and that of their clients and taking costs out the organization. What is meant by cloud computing and what are the benefits and issues that accountants need to be aware of?
